POINTS OF INTEREST

Gloucester, Cape Ann — First white man to visit its shores was Thorwald in 1004. Harbor called by Norsemen "Krossanes." Gosnold landed here in 1602 and found the place had been used as a base by Portuguese fishermen. In 1605 Champlain sailed by the Cape but did not land. The next year, September 1606, he entered the harbor which he named Le Beauport and made a map of it. Attacked by 200 Indians and sailed away the next day. In 1614 Capt. John Smith named it Cape Ann after Anne of Denmark, mother of King Charles I. First permanent settlement of the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1623.

Stage Fort Park at westerly entrance of city. Site of settlement of Massachusetts Bay Colony, 1623-24. Tablet in commemoration of that fact placed on face of large boulder. Conant, Half Moon and Stone beaches.

Rafe's Chasm and Norman's Woe. Scene of "Wreck of the Hesperus." At Magnolia, Hesperus avenue. Fissure in solid rock cliff is 60 feet deep and 12 feet wide.

Mother Ann profile in Stone discovered in 1892 by Capt. William Thompson of Salem at tip end of Eastern Point. Dog Bar breakwater extends from a half mile long, completed in 1904 and extends from this point. On Eastern Point are many of the show residences of the North Shore. "The Ramparts" occupies site of Fort Independence.

Ten Pound Island in outer harbor; government fish hatchery thereon. Used as sheep pasture in early days. Five Pound Island in inner harbor; both so named for amounts in colonial money originally sold for.

Thompson's mountain, or Mt. Anne, West Gloucester, highest elevation on the Cape, 255 feet above sea level. Fine view ranging from Mt. Agamenticus on Maine coast to Wachusett Mountain, Bunker Hill Monument to Boston Bay. Tract given over as reservation in memory of Lawrence Minot; thickly wooded, favorite picnic resort; reached from New Way Lane. Nearby is Haskell's pond, from which city's water is secured.

Ravenswood Park, natural forest area extending from Fresh Water Cove to West Gloucester. Reached from Fresh Water Cove or the so-called Old Salem road, Western avenue. Mason Walton's cabin, "Hermit of Bond's Hill," on this road. Well worth frequenting.

Beacon or Governor's Hill, near center of city, from Washington street. Small reservation at top from which a fine view may be obtained.

Dogtown Commons, site of deserted Revolutionary settlement. Reached from Gee avenue, Riverdale. Fine example of boulder deposits of glacial period. "Whale's Jaw," best known of these boulders, at edge of common. Rocking stone, etc., now taken over by the city as a water shed.

Wharves skirting the water front, interesting as affording "close-up" of fish curing, etc.

Babson House, opposite Ellery House, erected by Col. John Low about 1745. Old slave pens in attic.

Main street, first known as Fore, afterwards as Front street. Principal business avenue. Laid out 1642. Middle street, paralleling Main, contains many old colonial houses and the Judith Sargent house, the grounds of which, originally extending to Main street have been restored.

On Middle street are the First Parish (Unitarian) Church, oldest in Gloucester; Independent Christian (Universalist) first Universalist society in America, church edifice erected 1805; St. John's Episcopal Church, Trinity Congregational Church and the First Baptist Church.

Sawyer Free Library and Reading Room, Middle street, adjoining Unitarian church. Interior fine specimen of colonial woodwork. Originally home of Thomas Sanders, merchant.

Old Town Hall Square, at junction of Middle and Washington streets. Beautiful American Legion Memorial building and monument on which was placed statue of Joan of Arc by Anna Vaughan Hyatt.

Fort Point, at western side of inner harbor, down Commercial street from Main, fortified in 1743. Now Italian quarter and rendezvous of fishermen of that nationality.

Drives around the Cape: Up Washington street, through Riverdale, past Annisquam, Bay View, Lanesville into Pigeon Cove, Rockport and completing the circuit to Gloucester. Almost a continuous ocean view, which was completed when the Bass Rocks-Land's End stretch was completed.

Beaches: Little Good Harbor and Long Beaches, between Bass Rocks and Land's End, Rockport. Wingaersheek Beach, West Gloucester, largest on Cape, two miles long, 600 feet deep at low tide; reached from Essex avenue, West Gloucester, down Concord street.

Quarries at Bay View and Pigeon Cove, among largest in country, near main highway.

Blynman canal, first cut in 1642 by Rev. Richard Blynman, at Western entrance of city.

Drives: "Little Heater," "Dark Hole" at West Gloucester.

Old Salem road, first highway from the town, blazed out in 1626, when part of the settlers went to Salem. Down Hesperus avenue (discontinued in 1892) to Salem. Name erroneously applied to Old Pest House road, leading through Ravenswood park from Western ave.

WALL STREET THE GOAT

Convenient Alibi for the Public's Mistakes of Judgment — Real Culprits Directors of Corporations who "Water" Their Stocks to Sell to Unsuspecting Public — Law Should Penalize This Practice.

EVERY generation of the gullible — and their name is legion — who get caught in wildcat speculation, seeking an alibi for its own lack of common sense and business acumen instinctively fix the blame on "Wall Street" unmindful of the fact that every man is the architect of his own misfortunes.

Two of the several causes for the passing depression are the Florida land craze — literally nothing like it since the South Sea bubble — and the insensate buying by the public at inflated prices of highly watered stock.

In the Florida buying craze Wall Street had absolutely no hand. Its stock was not handled in the street or in any other commodity market. People crazed by their own cupidity bought small parcels of sand lots, some of it under water, at unheard of prices $25,000 being a modest quotation for a hundred foot lot. It parallels exactly conditions described by Dickens in his American notes.

Inevitably this bubble burst and the $25,000 lots could not be sold for $250 and thousands caught in the speculative craze were ruined, cleaned to their skin of all they possessed. There was no short selling in this to depress prices yet the bottom dropped out of this sieve much quicker than if the stock had hammered in an orderly fashion on the stock exchange. So the Florida debacle cannot be blamed on Wall Street.

How about the drop in prices on the stock exchange—who is to blame? The answer is plain. The blame primarily attaches to the directors of corporations of all kinds listed on the exchanges and not to the brokers. For example: a business corporation sanely capitalized at $500,000, under the impulse of post war inflation, found itself earning instead of its normal six or seven per cent, twelve or fifteen per cent under abnormal conditions.

Here came the temptation for sharp work, universally indulged in. Then say 10,000 original shares of stock was "split," that is, increased four or five times to 40,000 or 50,000 shares with a rider of "rights," the privilege to purchase more at figures several times the actual worth. For one or two years a ten per cent or more dividend was paid and then the pinch began to come. Orders fell off and mills were perforce, put on half time with a much shortened crew. The result was that earnings decreased sharply and continued to fall so that in practically every instance the corporation which was earning ten per cent with a hundred thousand shares, found itself earning less than two per cent or less, with four times that amount of outstanding stock. This news became public property in the report of quarterly earnings.

The inside directors quietly sold their holdings at the top. The public held the bag.

The veriest tyro could see that this inflated stock bought at $200 or $300 per share on the upturn was practically worth nothing as an investment and, realizing this, frightened investors tumbled over themselves to get rid of their holdings. The greater part, however, counselled by the daily press financial writers and tipsters were advised to hold on; told that the decline was only momentary and that prosperity which had fled was just around the corner waiting to again appear and pep up the market and situation. And so the greater part mortgaged their bodies and souls for the requisite margins — most had bought by this method — and also bought more to even up on a scale down, thereby getting' whipsawed as the market dropped. Misrepresentation by directors of corporations aided and abetted by purchased published misinformation in journals of the highest repute taken as gospel by a gullible public is the real reason and source for the tremendous financial debacle which has wrought so much havoc, ruin and self-inflicted immolation of humanity in this country. But one writer as far as could be observed in his syndicated articles advised his public to be cautious, but he was unheeded.

PRESIDENTIAL TIMBER

Prophecy of Mr. James Bryce Continues to Hold Good — Neither Hoover nor Roosevelt Men of Outstanding Caliber — Present Indications are that Mills will be Grand Chancellor, 1932-36.

MR. JAMES BRYCE — in his later days Lord Bryce — than whom no Englishman has written more sympathetically and understandingly regarding the American Constitution and its governmental affairs in a work published in the early nineties said that the people of the United States have chosen few great men to the presidency, but that as a rule, it prefers mediocrity to brilliance. He cites Washington, Jackson, Lincoln, as among the few outstanding examples who have been called to that office. Whether, had he continued, in a later work his appraisal and named Grover Cleveland may be debatable. Without doubt Wilson would have been included in that group.

Since Wilson, Harding, Coolidge and Hoover. The great political conventions have finished their work. Hoover is renominated with Roosevelt the nominee of the Democrats.

We think a fair appraisal of both that neither approaches brilliancy or greatness. They belong in the average class. To tell the truth Hoover has not been impressive during the first years of his administration. By the same token Roosevelt has been less so during his incumbency of the governorship of New York.

What the United States has needed since the Wilson administration has been the man of a firm hand. During that time and down to the present the crying need has been one at the White House able to cope with the overwhelming flood of lawlessness which has overspread the country. For invested in the president of the United States are autocratic powers not surpassed by that of the Czar of Russia or their successors the Soviet dictators. That the powers that be have utterly failed to meet this situation is not debatable.

RIVETS

N. S. OLDS, in Scribner's Magazine.

My grandfather's hands were wise and hard
For he swung his adze in a Salem yard
And thumbed his planks and drove his nails
Till he learned his trade from strake to rails
And could dream a ship till he saw her whole
With royals set, and feel her roll
And lift her bows like a dripping blade
In the spacious swells of the India Trade.

... He's long been dead, and his ships are junk,
All rotting askew, or stripped or sunk.
But when they were loosed and took their slide
And squared away on the greasy tide,
He hitched up his belt, and "By God," said he,
"No sweeter ship has sailed the sea;

And she's all mine, yes, every inch,
From the spring of her heel to the swell of her winch."
And he dusted his hands and wiped his face
And stood up his sledge in its proper place.

... And I swing here on a plank in a bight
Catching hot rivets from morning till night.
They've never told me who planned the craft
Or where they'll route the riveted raft:
Perhaps she'll do a tourist turn
And pack high hats with money to burn,
Or carry cargo of frozen meat
From Argentine, or hides or wheat,

They don't tell me; but I hear the clang
Of the hammers going, and see the gang

Ahoisting beams like a skyscraper frame
And bolting them in, and always the same
And all day long I do my stunt
Of rackety rack and buntity bunt.
It's got to be so, for it's part of the plan
But I wonder some if I'm really a man.

... She'll soon be done and I'll be through.
They'll give me my time when my time is due.
I s'pose I've done my share of the trick,
They treat me right, and I shouldn't kick.
So I'll shed my jeans and I'll count
my pay
And call it the end of a perfect day.
But all I'll own of the old man pride,
Are rows of rivets along her side.

NORTH SHORE THEATRE

Two "wise eggs" who were too wise. . . .

That in brief, is the story of "Lady and Gent," George Bancroft's latest starring picture, which opens Sunday at the North Shore Theatre for four days.

Petite Wynne Gibson, latest Hollywood "find," who is soaring to stardom in her own right, plays opposite the virile Mr. Bancroft, and Charles Starrett, James Gleason, John Wayne and Joyce Compton have other leading roles.

Bancroft and Miss Gibson are cast as a couple of self-styled "big timers" who dwell on the shady side of Broadway, battling merrily with each other and with any one else who crosses their path.

The uneven tenor of their lives becomes even more uneven when Bancroft's best friend suddenly dies, leaving a 12-year-old son alone in the world. Just what their responsibilities to the lad are they sit down to consider.

And they reach a conclusion that produces results as whimsical as they are radical.

"Lady and Gent" was written especially for Bancroft by Grover Jones and William Slavens McNutt. Stephen Roberts directed.

OCEANSIDE THEATRE

On Tuesday night, July 18, North Shore society witnessed the opening of the summer season of seven plays to be presented at the Oceanside Theatre this year. The charming theatre was crowded to the doors, and from the time of the rising of the curtain upon the first scene of "The Man in Possession" the audience evinced to the fullest extent their appreciation of the flawless production. The story of the play is excruciatingly funny to begin with, and the splendid cast did it more than justice. Valerie Taylor proving to be far more attractive and beautiful than even her publicity pictures have shown her to be, won the audience from her first appearance with her charm and talent as Crystal Wetherby, a poor but beautiful widow; Hugh Sinclair, as Raymond Dabney, the man in possession, defies description. The spicy dialogue and swift tempo, he carries out in a manner that only one of his personality could. Those who saw him in "Too True to be Good," will have no difficulty in imagining him in this clever part.

The locale is London. Raymond Dabney, after serving a term in prison, for selling a car not wholly paid for, returns here to his family. His father, Paul Dabney, excel-

THE FIGHTING HARADENS

Capt. Nathaniel, Last of the Famous Trinity, Sailing Master of the U. S. Frigate Constitution—Commended for Gallantry in Action During the Siege of Tripoli

By J. R. P. — No. 3

AND NOW we come to Nathaniel, last of the trinity of Haradens, who shed luster and glory on the maritime annals of their native city, last of the dynasty whose career is embraced in

Like all his kith and kin he was early bred to the sea, pursuing the fisheries for a short time as a young man. There is a tradition that while on a fishing voyage during the Revolutionary period the craft in which he was sailing was boarded by a party from ing in the merchant service. Largely through the good offices of his famous cousin Capt. Jonathan, he was given the berth of sailing master of the U. S. Frigate Constitution a few years after she was launched, and in which he was destined to see active service.

This picture was made from a photo taken in 1862 of Stage Fort, then occupied by a company of United States troops. It has been restored as in the original by the Conservation committee of the local D. A. R. Chapter with a complement of ancient naval guns. The final dedication of a tablet giving the inscription from its occupancy in 1625 by Capt. John Hewes, who successfully resisted Capt. Myles Standish and his Plymouth Soldiers and during six wars up to and including the Spanish-American war, occurred July 4. A search of 25 years revealed a copy of this photo from which the cut was made. The visitor today will find it hard to detect any traces of restoration, yet the original embrasures were filled and the plan changed. This is the oldest fortification in the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

that period whose generic term is included in the War of 1812 from the commencement of the naval encounters with Tripoli and Algerian pirates.

Nathaniel was born October 13, 1764 at Annisquam in the house built by his first ancestor on the Cape, Edward which, added on by several after generations, is still standing in a good state of preservation, one of the finest specimens of the sixteenth century colonial in New England, now occupied by Daniel Howard Woodbury, a descendant on the distaff side of Nathaniel.

a British man of war in search of men. Young Nathaniel appeared quite like mariner material and was impressed and made a sailor on one of His Majesty's King George III ships of war. He proved an apt pupil and imbibed all the fine points of the maritime game from some of the best tutors in the boatswain division of the fleet. This knowledge almost forced upon him he turned to good advantage later in the service of his country.

Shortly after the Revolution Nathaniel found himself a free man once more and returned to his native place engag-

The name of Haraden carried weight then in the American navy, none more so. The Constitution was one of the most powerful ships of the line afloat in any nation and rated one of the most expert sailing masters at the command of the national government.

AN EXPLANATION

Owing to an error in making up last week a caption intended for "The Old Witch House" at Pigeon Cove was inserted under cut of old Third Parish (Universalist) Church at Annisquam. Before the mistake was corrected a number of copies were printed which by inadvertence were included with others sent out. To the great majority of our readers the identity of the picture was obvious.

In this capacity he ranked second in importance to the commander. While the commander was giving his sole attention to the details of battle it devolved upon the sailing master to place his ship with precision in the most advantageous positions in order to get the "weather gage" and other important points of vantage which generally spelt the difference between victory and defeat.

No more skillful mariner in this most important line sailed the sea. A commander with Haraden might well forget everything but the plan of battle with the knowledge that the ship would be properly berthed and maneuvered. And this confidence was never misplaced. He carried the Haraden naval fame on untarnished by defeat.

He was a man of quick decisions having implicit confidence in himself and exacted implicit obedience from all under his control. "Jumping Billy" the sailors called him and he was all the name implied.

In 1799 at the age of 35 we find him with a warrant as sailing master in the navy. Shortly after trouble developed with the Algerian pirates who were wreaking havoc on our commerce as it passed and repassed through the bottle-necked straits of Gibraltar, that trap which made the task of these sea-vultures easy.

With the gallant Commodore Preble in command the Constitution arrived in Tripolitan waters with the avowed intention, with others of the fleet, of ridding the sea of these buccaneers. The task was no easy one. It was resolved to beard the lion in his den. In July, 1804, siege was laid to the Corsairs' lair, Tripoli, the base of their fleet. This siege continued through August. One of its big moments was on August 3 of that year when the fleet sailed boldly into the harbor bombarding the forts and coming to grips with the enemy vessels with such success that the enemy was forced to bid for peace which was arranged a short time after. This campaign was effectual in accomplishing its purpose. The power of these Moorish pirates was broken.

For gallantry in action August 3, he with others of the line, were accorded special commendation and he was given a lieutenant's commission. In October of 1804, Haraden was transferred to the U. S. S. Adams and in which he returned to this country and was afterwards given command of a gunboat in which he was again ordered to Tripoli for duty, arriving there in the summer of 1805, just after peace had been declared.

Again returning to this country he was assigned to duty in 1807 at the navy yard at Washington, where he remained until his death in 1818.

Just prior to the declaration of the War of 1812 when it became evident that hostilities were inevitable, the naval authorities decided it was imperative that the Constitution receive a complete overhauling. That most important duty was assigned to the competent hands of Capt. Nathaniel Haraden who overhauled her fore and aft from stem to stern, from truck to keel, testing and replacing rope, rigging and hawser where needed, applying some of the lore learned during his days as an impressed seaman. To this thorough conditioning Commodore Hull attributed much of the phenomenal success the frigate achieved in that memorable sea campaign.

Just where Nathaniel Haraden is buried the writer has been unable to ascertain. In Bay View there is an ancient cemetery over looking Ipswich bay in which Haradens — including some Jonathans—Sargents, Langsford, Youngs, and other leading settlers of the community were buried, many marked with ancient slate headstones but none to Nathaniel of the Constitution. Farther along at Locust grove cemetery in Lanesville, a daughter of Nathaniel, Mary Haraden, wife of Gorham Babson, taking pride in her distinguished father, caused a monument to be erected which marks her grave, stating that she was the daughter of Capt. Nathaniel Haraden, sailing master of the U. S. Frigate Constitution, but there is nothing thereon to indicate the place of sepulture of Nathaniel. It was supposed until recently that he was interred here but such is not the case nor have the genealogists of the family thus far been able to definitely place his last resting place.

Toward the latter part of his life when in Washington he married a second time. Descendants of that marriage have been found in Germantown, Penn., but they have been unable to throw any light upon the matter. The records of the Congressional cemetery in Washington there show that the second wife was interred therein but no mention of Nathaniel was found.

It was not until just before the World War that those interested in local historical research began to evaluate properly the services of this outstanding family of patriot mariners when as has been told in a previous article representation was made to the navy department and one of the scout cruisers, built and launched during the war, was named Haraden and none more richly deserved such honor.

But one in the male line in direct descent from this distinguished twain, as far as the writer has been able to ascertain carries on the name, Edward, now residing in Quincy. However, a century and a half later, tardy recognition has been paid to their fame. Mainly through the instrumentality of Mayor John E. Parker, a bowlder on which has been affixed a tablet was placed at the entrance of Stage Fort Park which was dedicated with appropriate public ceremony July, this year.

DEL MONTE'S

On July 29, Del Monte's, much to the delight of North Shore society, will open its doors continuously. Up to this time the casino has been open on Friday and Saturday evenings only, for dinner and dancing. Luncheon, tea, and dinner will be served, and Ruby Newman in person with his superior band will entertain each evening. The beautiful Moorish casino, high on the jagged shore, overlooking, on the right, the threatening Reef of Norman's Woe, on the left the tremendous beauty of Rafe's Chasm, is indeed an ideal spot for an evening's entertainment. The strains of perfect harmony, floating out over the moonlight-drenched terrace and ocean, make of the place a spot unequalled for relaxation and pleasure. This year the lighting system has been altered, and inside, the dancers glide under a pale, flattering blue-green atmosphere of light. Another innovation is the increased number of tables on the terrace, where, on the hottest night there is a steady cold breeze from the ocean. During the past weekend, the usual throng of summer visitors were present, while already, there are many bookings for parties next week.

Richard P. Hammond, youngest son of John Hays Hammond, who has been pursuing musical studies in Paris arrived at New York last Thursday on the Isle de France and came to "Look-out Hill" for a stay during the rest of the summer. Miss Natalie Hammond who has been with her father left last week for a short stay in New York.

SWIMMING activities at the Magnolia Beach Club are resolving themselves into training periods for the Labor Day meet. Two swimmers whose progress will be interesting to watch are William Esson of Newton, and Peter Covell of Brookline, both excellent in form and speed. The meet, as always, will include various classes, the contestants ranging in age from ten to twenty-one or over.

The tennis tournament started Monday at the Essex County Club, and many members of the Beach Club will participate, together with young people from all over the North Shore.

On Saturday, another of the weekly tea dances was held at the Beach Club, with Mrs. E. Prescott Rowe as hostess. These dances have become very popular, and the practice will be continued throughout the summer.

Among guests at the Beach Club this past week were: James Perry Emerson of Indiana, guest for two weeks of H. W. Farnum; Miss Barbara Wendell, Wrentham, guest of Mrs. Borden Covell; John Kendall, Belmont, guest of Weld Richardson; Jean Howard, Boston, Merrill Bense, Boston, guest of Ernesta Rueter; Mrs. John G. Downing, Newton, guest of Josephine O'Connell; Mac Strong, Ossining, guest of Mrs. John Zinsset; Mr. and Mrs. Seranton, West Newton, guest of Mrs. Esson; Mrs. Harvey Hubbell, Bridgeport, guest of Miss Jones; Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. Charles Choate, Bridgeport, guests of Miss Jones; Olivia Thorndike, Nahant, guest of Oliver Ames; Mrs. E. A. McLaughlin Jr., Newton, guest of Miss Josephine O'Connell; Mrs. John G. Downing, Boston, guest of Liberty Dick; Priscilla McCaffrey, Boston, guest of H. MacAusland.

At the Oceanside following the opening performance of "The Man in Possession" a charming reception and dance was held. The Oceanside Theatre Company, as well as Mr. and Mrs. George C. Krewson Jr., owners of the hotel, mingled with the audience in the beautifully furnished lounge, making a very delightful conclusion to the evening's entertainment.

Another feature this year at the Oceanside are the dances that are run

ANNISQUAM

AN ESPECIALLY fine display of roses along River road are those at the cottages of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cunningham and Mrs. Martha Harvey. The Dorothy Perkins rambler appears to have displaced the deep crimson so popular some ten or more years ago. The fence of the Babson house, meeting house green, for its entire length is one field of a cloth of pink and white of these beautiful blooms. Perhaps the most delicate compliment that may be paid a woman is to immortalize her name after a flower. Call the roster Madam John Laing, Frau Karl Druschki, Mrs. Sharman Crawford and many others whose vogue will never die.

It looks as if yachting was going to perk up a little. Three of the fifteens have been put into the water and may figure in the coming racing. "Don't give up the ship."

WILL OPEN CAPE ANN ESTATES TO PUBLIC

Opportunity to inspect several interesting houses on Cape Ann will be afforded on Friday, August 5, when some of the attractive summer residences on Eastern Point in Gloucester will be open to the public under the auspices and for the benefit of the North Shore Arts Association. The committee in charge of this plan is made up of Mrs. Samuel Temple, an artist, of "Harbor Lights," who is serving as chairman; Captain Horace Bean of Brimmer street, Boston, president of the association; Mrs. A. H. Atkins, a sculptor, whose summer home is known as "Haskell House," and Miss Margaret Fitzhugh Browne of "Cove House," Annisquam.

Hon. Piatt Andrew's place, known as "Red Roof," is one of the houses to be on view, and with its terraced gardens will prove alluring. Mrs. T. Russell Sullivan of Marlboro street is not occupying this season her summer home, "Villa Latomia," on Eastern Point, but the house and garden, with its pool as a distinctive feature, will be open to visitors. The place is occupied this season by Dr. and Mrs. Fielding Lewis Taylor of New York.

Tea is to be served at "Blighty" and tickets admitting to all these estates, and including tea, may be had at the North Shore Art Club in East Gloucester square. A SEA BURTHEN

A ship swinging
 As the tide swings up and down,
 And men's voices singing, . . .
 East away O! West away!
 And a very long way from London town.

A lantern glowing
 And the stars looking down,
 And the sea smells blowing, . . .
 East away O! West away!
 And a very long way from London town.

Light in wild weather
 From a tavern window old and brown,
 And men singing together, . . .
 East away O! West away!
 And a very long way from London town.

MILADY GOES SHOPPING

"UP YOU GET!" Flick bounced into Peggy's room without deigning to knock. Peggy turned a tousled head and groaned.

"Come on," Flick was impatient. "The tennis courts are fairly crying for someone to use them, and my racket hasn't ever been used."

"What time is it," from Peggy sleepily.

"Early, and bright, and glorious," announced Flick, snapping up window shades, and making a noisy business of it. "And I'm having breakfast with you before we go out."

"Oh, you are?" remarked Peggy without enthusiasm, "well, you can run right downstairs and start it now."

"O. K." Flick was already half way down the stairs. "What's to eat?" she shouted from below.

"Everything," said Peggy flatly. "I spent all yesterday buying out the First National Stores, and if you can't find anything it's your fault."

"Ooooooh!" Flick wasn't even listening. "This china! Where'd you find it, Peggy? And the darling little matching breakfast tray. Peggy, you've been holding out. I never saw such cute things."

Peggy laughed, restored to good humor and came running down the stairs. "Oh, that!" she exclaimed. "That's from L. E. Andrews. They call that service for two, a honeymoon set. Cute, don't you think? And it's darling to use on occasions like this when someone drops in for breakfast. And wait a minute. I bought some more things there that are darling." She dove into a closet and emerged triumphant with a large secure looking thermos jug. "A motor jug, for cold or warm drinks," she explained, "perfectly grand for an all day trip. And see this darling wicker hamper for sandwiches? Really they have a marvelous new department at L. E. Andrews, now. China of all sorts, toys for the beach or for indoor amusement, baskets of all kinds, trays and decanters of all description."

Flick was enchanted. "No wonder you people all love to shop in Gloucester."

"How about breakfast?" suggested Peggy, "do you want to turn on the toaster, please, Flick? I'll tend to the coffee. Say," she interrupted herself, "that's some tennis racket. Wright and Ditson, eh?"

"Yes," beamed Flick, "I bought it and some wonderful balls at Gray's yesterday morning. Just hold it a minute. There, do you blame me for not wanting to waste this morning?" Flick performed a back-hand drive with the bread knife.

"Great form!" came a voice from the kitchen door, and Chubby appeared with Jack and Bob and Shelley.

"It smells," remarked Shelley, "exactly like breakfast!"

"Spongers!" sniffed Peggy, trying not to look disconcerted at the appearance of Shelley after a two weeks' unexplained absence.

"But," pleaded Bob, "awfully hungry ones, and that toaster is doing things to that bread."

"It's not," said Shelley, "burning it, if that's what you think, because I think it's just like the one we bought at the Gloucester Electric Company, and their toasters simply do not burn toast."

Bob stopped in the middle of his dash across the room to rescue the toast, and walked the rest of the way. "Some little toaster," he conceded, "and Peggy, that's some stove you have there."

Peggy looked over her shoulder. "It's a Glenwood Insulated Range," she exclaimed. "I bought it last summer at the Gloucester Gas Light Company, and I've never had a single thing go wrong with it. Really it's the most perfect range I've ever had."

"Glenwood Robertshaw oven heat control?" queried Jack.

"Oh, yes," Peggy agreed, "and it works beautifully."

"But," interrupted Flick, "what I am is hungry, and that bacon certainly smells good."

"I second the motion!" cried Chubby, pulling up a chair.

"Well, we all seem to be here except Ann, Peter and Ruth, and your two absent brothers," remarked Peggy to Flick as they finished the delicious breakfast.

"Let's plan something for the day," suggested Shelley, "a shopping excursion, or a swim or a picnic, — anything."

"Count me out, and Peggy, too, for the morning," Flick arose, "we're playing tennis."

"Here comes Ann," said Chubby looking out the window.

"Good," exclaimed Bob, "then we will plan something. I have to go over to the Gloucester National Bank anyhow and deposit some money, so we could all go over, go to the North Shore movies or something."

"Who's going to the movies?" said Ann from the threshold. "There's a perfectly grand picture showing."

"I can't go, though I'd love to," demurred Flick, "I have to buy some things. My brothers are really coming tonight and I haven't done a thing to that cottage. It's hardly furnished. Peggy, you said you'd take me over to the Gloucester Coal and Lumber Company and get some furniture to paint for my porch and for my living room."

"I will," said Peggy, "let's all meet here before lunch and plan what we'll do. I know. The Stage Coach Inn. Let's all go there for lunch and we can decide there."

The suggestion was taken up with enthusiasm and the Clan parted temporarily, planning to meet again at noon.

As Flick and Peggy were driving over to the very attractive and fascinating old Stage Coach Inn after an exciting morning of tennis, they were both fairly silent.

Suddenly Flick broke the silence. "You're wondering about Shelley," she accused.

Peggy stammered and blushed. "Well what if I am, you must be yourself," she retorted. "Here she walked out of our lives that day I told you about. And the next week she arrives at the back door, breaks up a dinner party, gets spirited away, so that we only hear her voice, and today she appears as though nothing in the world had happened. It's right queer if you ask me."

"I like both Shelley and Bob," said Flick.

"I, too," added Peggy, "but why the mystery? If they're in trouble we'd help them."

But the mystery refused to be solved by talk, and soon the entire clan with the exception of Ruth Wallace was assembled at the Inn.

"Where's Ruth?" Flick asked of Ruth's brother.

Peter smiled sadly, "Poison Ivy," he sighed. "It's my own fault, I should have cut it away somehow, but I let it go."

"Cut it away! Don't be silly!" said Jack. "You'd be covered with it yourself. Call up Swinson Brothers. They'll destroy it all for you with no trouble at all. They have just the facilities, you know. It's foolhardiness for an amateur to play around with that stuff."

"Poor kiddo," sympathized Ann, "I had it once. Let's stop at Wetherell's on the way back and see what they advise to use for it."

"Yes, they'll know," agreed Chubby. "I used something they told me for it and it cleared the eruptions right up."

"Which reminds me that we have to think of a program of entertainment for today," said Jack.

It was decided that a shopping tour, dinner at Del Monte's and a few rounds of Miniature Golf would constitute the best possible of afternoons.

"I'm anxious to see this East Gloucester Miniature Golf Course," remarked Peter. "It seems to me that I've heard nothing but Miniature Golf and Ski-Ball ever since I've met you people."

"Wait till you see it yourself," cried Peggy. "It's darling. All lighted up at night, too, with bright colored lights, and the Ski-Ball game, —" she stopped and made a wry face at Jack who was laughing at her, "Well, anyhow, it's a game of skill, and we can't all be skillful," she flung at Jack.

"Peter," said Jack, looking at him very earnestly, "It's all in knowing how."

"Ignore him, Peggy," suggested Ann, "It's the only way to handle people like that."

"Well, let's all get started," she suggested, "we have quite a program ahead."

"Magnolia first, and then back through Gloucester?" asked Shelley, as they climbed into their cars.

WHEELER'S POINT

A SECTION of Gloucester that is often overlooked by many of our summer visitors is Wheeler's Point. The Point, visited year after year by the same residents remains a little apart, a little conservative. The small colony here are really sufficient unto themselves, and therefore many outsiders hear but little about the place and leave Cape Ann not knowing what they have missed. The gardens, overlooking the river are in themselves well worth a day's inspection, and the boats, marshes, beautiful winding river, all combine to give to the spot a unique, varied beauty that is really breath-taking.

MAVOURNEEN WINS IN TRIANGLE CLASS

GLOUCESTER, July 16 — Thirty-five boats in four classes raced at Eastern Point this Saturday afternoon in a whole sail southeasterly breeze, a short chop making the going bumpy outside.

In the Rs the Taja led through-out. In the Sonders, Jacob Cox in the Tern with a well-calculated start got a good sendoff and steadily stretched out on all points of sailing.

In the Triangles six of the fleet beat the gun by a second, leaving a clear field to Mavourneen at the start. Black Bess, standing to the westward, turned the weather mark sixteen seconds ahead of Mavourneen. However, on the run to Kettle Island, Mavourneen retrieved her loss, going into first place by a narrow margin.

Coming into the harbor on the home stretch, Mavourneen and Black Bess became involved in a luffing match, leaving an open lane for Peggy Farrell in the Sprite to take second place over Black Bess.

In the Cape Knockabouts, sailing the inside course, Touraeg established a lead on the windward leg which she held thereafter. The summary:

TWO BOATS CAPSIZE

AT ANNISQUAM

GLOUCESTER, July 16 — A piping gusty southeasterly gave the little fellows at Annisquam rough weather a plenty in Ipswich Bay this afternoon. There was a sharp jump to the sea and the pumps were manned frequently to get rid of excess water ballast.

The going proved too stiff for four of the fish boats. Two were capsized and two disabled. The club launch was right at hand and rendered assistance, taking off the beleaguered crews and towing the craft back to port. The course for both classes was a triangular ocean going for boats of their size. A broad reach to Plum Cove, dead before it to the inner mark, broad off in the bay, and a dead beat home.

The birds had a brother and sister tussle between Paul and Evelyn Woodbury, the sister winning. Both took the lead early in the game, Evelyn, in the van holding it until on the beat back, when Jack Bloombergh, in the Tern, wrested second place from Paul Woodbury, but the latter regained his original position, coming into the quarter stretch in the river.

In the fish class, Flying Fish and Shad were leaders on the first two legs, but on the dead ahead work fell down. Most of the fleet took the long tack up the Lanesville shore, in order to get into smooth water. The contest at the lighthouse was between Harry Griffin and Jack Cunningham, but Perch overstood, losing by six seconds. The summary:

TAJA, TOURAEG, TERN
AND BLACK BESS WIN

GLOUCESTER, July 17 — Keen work was in evidence during the race at Eastern Point this afternoon. A stiff southerly interspersed with sudden puffs prevailed throughout, kicking up a short confused sea. The course was the regular triangle, a beat to the southern mark, a reach to Kettle Island and a run home, the triangles only breaking out spinners on this leg.

The winners were Taja in Class R, Tern in the Sonder class, Black Bess in the Triangles and Touraeg in the Cape Code Knockabouts. The summary:

FLAMINGO AND POLLYWOG II
ANNISQUAM WINNERS

GLOUCESTER, July 17 — Another stiff breeze from the south-east this afternoon sent the Anni-squam classes over the course in good time. The water in the bay was fairly smooth, being under a lee in southerly winds.

There was difficulty in locating the inner mark so-called in the middle of the bay, in fact it could not be found, having vanished since the last sail. The difficulty was solved by the lead-off boats, the birds, keeping on to the Ipswich buoy and making that the turn.

The fishers in the rear sailing the same course followed suit.

The triangular course in the bay gave a beam reach to Plum Cove, a broad reach to Ipswich and a beat home. The Woodbury boats, the Flamingo and Oloof in order named were always in command of the situation.

Harry Griffin in the Perch apparently had the race in the fish class sewed up when an accident threw him out of the running. He had finished three outside legs in the bay at the lighthouse with a good lead and was standing down the homestretch in the river when a stay gave way.

Pollywog II won in the fish class. A torn sail put Barracuda out.

Three of the 15-footers have been put into the water and may figure in the racing in the future.

"That's right." Chubby took the lead and they were soon in the Grande Maison de Blanc, entranced before the beautiful display of goods. The summer blankets caught Shelley's eye, and she summoned the others to see them. They were beautiful. Of ethereal soft lightness, they were delicately colored in pastel shades, and bound with the finest of satin. Some were the same colors checked with white. The blanket covers, too, were exquisitely beautiful. There were silk ones of all colors, matching the blankets, and with lace insertions in the center and border, and there were among the more inexpensive, blanket covers of the simpler but very attractive satin striped dimité.

From the Grande Maison, they crossed the street to Manahan's where a new and startling beautiful supply of evening dresses had just arrived. Peggy could not resist the blue and yellow printed softest of silk crepes which suited her blonde complexion perfectly, while Ann was enchanted by a new Creamy Parchment crepe with a jacket, having rich Kolinsky sleeves. There were adorable prints of all colors, the new Parakeet shades predominating, gay and young little dresses that were made for tea and supper dancing. But finally the girls were forced to leave by the boys, restless, and anxious to be on their way.

"I can see that my account at the Cape Ann National will be sadly in need of repair by the end of the summer," remarked Jack, as they started for Gloucester, "but who am I to quibble over pennies well spent?"

"Good boy!" laughed his wife. "Now I won't feel so bad insisting that we stock up on Gorton's Seafood. I've been wanting to suggest that we invest a little in a summer's supply of their canned products, and haven't liked to."

"You needn't have worried," reassured Jack, "I have had the same idea myself for a long time."

"By the way, Jack," asked Shelley from the back seat, "I've forgotten the name of the ice company that you suggested we patronize. It was Cape something, but I can't remember —"

"Cape Pond Ice Company," furnished Ann. "Their ice is flawless, so it must have been theirs."

"Oh, Shelley," said Ann, "how did your aquarium come out? I meant to ask you before."

Shelley looked embarrassed. "Of course you haven't had a chance," she remarked, "I suppose I've behaved very badly, I'm —"

"Why, Shelley," Ann interceded, "I'm sorry, I didn't mean to embarrass you. Please don't feel that you have to explain a thing. It's ridiculous. We missed you, and we're glad you're back." She gave Shelley a long glance, filled with meaning.

Shelley laughed, "O. K. Ann, you're the boss," she said. "If I'm not to explain I won't. But anyhow about my aquarium. Someone told me goldfish. But goldfish are stupid, uninteresting things. I wish you could see the fish that I found. Why they're fascinating. I got them at Merchant's Tropical Fish Hatchery over at Plum street in East Gloucester. You never saw such fish. All colors, every color in the world, and often all on the same fish! And they come from all parts of the world.

I have some varieties that are very rare that I bought there. He has all kinds, some rare, some common. Some are even live-bearing, and will breed in your own home. Then there are others that breed like other fish. The man told me, by the way, that I was, in having an aquarium, following one of the most popular hobbies among the elite. So all in all it was quite an idea."

"Why, I'm thrilled," said Ann, "I can't wait to see the things."

Arriving in Gloucester, the Clan all met at Barker's where by a unanimous vote they indulged in the delicious creamy sodas for which the establishment is so famous.

"Now where?" questioned Chubby, as the last drop disappeared.

"Well, I'm off to the Smart Shop you were talking about," said Peter, "if you'll direct me, Jack."

"I'll go with you," offered Jack. "My wife has been after me to buy a new bathing suit for days, and I don't know of a better place anywhere to get one."

"Where? Earle O. Phillips' Smart Shop? I'll go with you," said Chubby, "I have never been there, but I saw something I couldn't get along without and at the lowest price you can imagine."

"In that case," remarked Peggy, "I suppose the girls are simply supposed to amuse themselves?"

"But do we know how to do it?" asked Shelley, eloquently.

"Yes, come on," said Ann, "I want to go over to Blanchard's first of all. There are some things there that I can't even tell you about. You'd have to see them to get the full benefit."

"I'm glad I'm a single man," remarked Chubby, sadly gazing at Jack.

Jack laughed, and the girls started off. At Blanchard's they found that all that Ann had promised was quite true. The costume jewelry that was on display was gorgeous in its variety, gaiety, and beauty. There were bags with matching jewelry, earrings, necklace and bracelet, and there were imitation pearls that were exquisitely beautiful at the most moderate possible of prices. There were a great many of the flat, convenient and effectual looking beach flapjack compacts, and there were captivating compacts with hand-painted design, delicate, feminine and chic.

From Blanchard's, the girls strolled up to the Boston Store. At W. G. Brown's they were amazed at the Codfish Skin Goods that were exactly like tanned leather, and delighted with the variety of articles that were being shown. Combination comb and file cases, writing cases, cigar cases, license cases, bill folds, purses, key cases, card cases; these and innumerable other items, kept the girls occupied for a long time.

Finally, leaving Brown's they met the men just coming from Phillips' Smart Shop, loaded down with bundles.

"Listen," said Jack to Ann, as they met, "why don't we go in now that we're here and make arrangements about our trip to Europe in the fall. It's a good chance, and we want to start thinking about it now."

"What!" exclaimed Shelley, "do they even have a travel bureau in Gloucester?"

"Yes, and it's a knockout," furnished Peggy, "they make all arrangements for you, and at no extra cost."

"But really Jack, Hersey Travel Agency is so reliable, and we're in rather a hurry now. They'll be able to take care of us at any time. There's no hurry about it. Let's leave it for some other time," suggested Ann.

"All right," Jack agreed, "we'll let it go for today. Do we have to do anything else?"

"I'd like," said Peggy, "to stop at the Cape Ann Laundry for a minute to collect a package of clothes and things I sent to be laundered."

"You don't need to call for them, Peggy," contradicted Chubby. "You know as well as I do that they never delay deliveries. Everything comes back just as it's sent, as soon as possible."

"Why, of course," agreed Peggy, "I've forgotten that I'm in Gloucester I guess. We used to have such trouble with our laundry at home. They never delivered till it was too late, and the things you sent were always mixed up. The Cape Ann Laundry is really remarkable in its orderliness. Everything is arranged so neatly and in perfect order and condition."

"May I make a suggestion?" ventured Flick. "How about supper after we've played golf at the beautiful tea-house that Ann was telling me about?"

"The Sargent-Murray-Gilman-Hough House?" asked Ann, "I think that's a perfect idea! Most of us have never been there, and really it's an education! It's so really old and beautiful! Filled with antiques and the most beautiful panelling and staircase. Not to mention the food!"

The Clan piled into their respective cars and started for the Miniature Golf Course. As they drove along, Shelley became more and more silent. She and Bob were riding this time with Chubby and Peggy, while Flick, Ann, Jack and Peter occupied the other car.

"Say, Chubby and Peg," suddenly Shelley spoke. "You two think I'm pretty queer, I guess."

Peggy nudged Chubby, and held her breath as Shelley went on.

"Well, as a matter of fact, — there's something that I ought to tell you, before enjoying your hospitality any further."

"Now, Shelley," Bob began, in a quieting, persuasive tone.

"No, I think they ought to know," Shelley's voice was low and firm.

"I —"

Suddenly the car lurched. Chubby, engrossed in Shelley's words had not been watching the road carefully enough, and to avoid collision with an oncoming car, swerved sharply to the right. There was a loud crash as the car hit a tree, a resounding jar, and silence.

WALL STREET

The tremendous holdings of these people were literally dumped on the stock exchange in order to save what little could be realized. Every sale connotes a buyer and men versed in the inside standing of corporations could not be expected to pay the prices or anywhere near what these innocent dupes had been cajoled into paying. The result was that many of these choice stocks — they could be named here if necessary — dropped of their own dead weight of stagnant water to $10 and $5 a share from as high as $300.

Everything was all right with the public as long as prices soared and they hung on sure of attaining the financial millennium. But when the deluge came the wicked "shorts" were again pitched upon as the goats.

Coming down to the non-speculative classes mechanism and tradesmen suffering from non-employment. Here is a class that for the past ten years has dictated its terms of wages, hours and output, on a scale never approached by labor in history nor never will again. There have been "hard times" in former periods but it was then the custom of the laborer to lay something by for a rainy day, a balance in the bank for emergencies. But the old time Yankee attribute of thrift was jettisoned. The people were encouraged by the corporations to buy on the installment plan, washing machines that cost $20 to make, radios that with the cabinets cost $60 and other household apparatus at five and six times these figures, expensive fur coats and, of course, an automobile or two, until they were obligated years ahead of their resources. Came the sudden letup and the people were on the rocks, nothing being saved to tide them over and the worn out articles returned half paid for to the sellers. Then came, for the first time in this country, the great demand on the poor departments, the thrifty being penalized for the unthrifty. It will require quite a period of years before the present spoiled generation is liquidated and their successors oriented to cutting their garment according to their financial cloth.

In the case of such crazes as Florida land buying, there seems to be no way of saving the people from themselves. But the law should find a way to prevent stock watering and the sale of such worthless paper to an unsuspecting public. For selling watered, worthless stock is legalized thievery.

Neither has Roosevelt in his administration of the imperial state of New York been any more outstanding. The revelations of the Seabury investigation are known to all. He lacks the decision and character essential for a president in these troublesome times.

An example: Prior to the recent convention when the abortive effort to abrogate the two-thirds rule died aborning he wired the North Carolina delegation to the Democratic convention to stand fast in its announced intention to abrogate that time-honored rule. A storm of protest arose among the representative Democrats of the country and the next day he gave orders to his chief lieutenant Farley to call off the two-thirds movement denying that he ever sanctioned it. We quote as authority for this statement the dispatches which appeared in the daily press.

Had he stood steadfast to the Cromwellian program of his manager Farley and stuck to his guns, the country would have applauded his stand. Regardless of the ethics of the matter it would have exclaimed "At last here is a man of decision. We may not agree with him, but we admire his initiative and courage. We need a man of his specifications for the good of the country." And in our opinion this one act — courage of purpose — would have elected Roosevelt beyond doubt. Pussy-footing tactics overruled the bold Farley who ought to be the presidential candidate instead of his employer. And so was the big moment for Roosevelt fozzled.

If elected the Farley-House cabal which will direct his course is sure to run on the rocks unless House, as the result of the celebrated conference at Manchester last season when he outlined to Roosevelt the super-successful plan of presidential delegate campaign, goes off to England as representative to the Court of St. James to succeed Uncle Andy Mellon.

As far as it goes, Hoover, even with his Quaker antecedents and tendencies, appears to be a shade above Roosevelt in matters which require the statesmanship of stamina. Especially has this been developed since the courageous and brainy Mills has succeeded Mellon as chief navigator of the White House junta which charts the course the administration ship will follow. THE SHORE believes Ogden Mills will be the next Grand Chancellor — 1932-36.

A HOUSE OF SERVICE

- For twenty-six years the Gloucester Coal and Lumber Company have endeavored to give to the residents of Cape Ann all that there is in the way of service.
- Starting as a coal yard in 1906 the company has steadily increased its services until now it is capable of merchandizing literally anything from thumb tacks to a home complete, from planning to financing.
- At the present time the company occupies two large wharves in Gloucester harbor, receiving the majority of its coal and lumber by water. The finished lumber and flooring is brought in by rail and stored in a heat regulated warehouse. The heating plant in this building is arranged to provide a constant temperature with a low rate of humidity thus assuring all lumber of being perfectly dry and free from shrinkage.
- Included in the five acres of floor space are four large warehouses, a fully equipped mill, a garage and machine shop, a cement shed, and the coal pockets. In addition the company has added a new paint and hardware store carrying a full line of painters' supplies, carpenters' tools and hardware for the home and builder.
- We maintain offices in Gloucester, Rockport, Manchester, and Magnolia; free estimation service for any type of building. The company is also exclusive agent on the North Shore for the electric furnace man.

This undoubtedly will be supplemented by an appropriate public memorial to Capt. Jonathan whose meteoric career was related in THE SHORE of last week.

In this connection it seems passing strange that with the wealth of patriotic material at hand for the purpose the Haradens, Col. Peter Coffin, the hero of the Coffin's beach defense in August 1775, Peter Lurvey who heard the firing during Linzees' attack in 1775 and ran seven miles to the scene of action where he met his death, not to mention others, that a name for the local D. A. R. chapter was chosen from a locality entirely unidentified with this city. Similarly Parson Cleveland might have merited similar recognition at Rockport.

ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS WARD

Husband of Noted Gloucester Novelist
Recently Passed On — Some Reminiscences.

The death recently at Portsmouth, N. H., of Rev. Herbert D. Ward recalls that for a considerable period he was a most conspicuous figure in this community and the North Shore generally — and in the Nation — both by reason of his own personality and from the fact of his marriage here in 1888 to Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, one of the outstanding authors of international reputation of her generation.

Mr. Ward, a young man of striking personality, was an author of acknowledged merit, beginning with boys' stories and later turning to more seriously conceived and introspective work in the higher field of fiction. In later life he was engaged in newspaper work in the editorial department.

The marriage took place when Miss Phelps had attained the zenith of her fame. It was solemnized on the Moorland in the second "Old Maids Paradise" — the title of one of her novels — which brought her fame. She came to Gloucester early in the eighties, first to the Lanesville shore and then happening on the East Gloucester coastline during a ride was enraptured with the locality, as the story of her life plainly shows. Here on a point of rocks was built the first "old maids paradise" but as she relates, she was forced to flee to the backlands in order to escape the attentions of an ever increasing throng of the over curious.

Her first success was "Gates Ajar." After she came to East Gloucester. She drew from the wealth of fact of fisherman life material for "Jack the Fisherman," "The Madonna of the Tubs," "A Singular Life," which made a sensation throughout the country and enjoyed circulations in the hundreds of thousands.

Gloucester at that time was at the apex of prosperity.

RESEMBLED MINING TOWN

Its fleet of 400 large schooners fished prosperously. Money was plentiful and the town at the time resembled the outward aspects of a pioneer western mining camp which had just struck gold. All classes and conditions were attracted here.

The life of some of the fishermen and the environment of some of the attractions offered for his stay while ashore were all of the old order now passed in maritime centers. These Miss Ward depicted in her novels with impressionistic effect. An outcry arose, locally expressed, against this representation, but nothing more was incorporated in them than in the daily reports of the newspaper men of the time. It was just before the era of the telephone, and no man with Boston connections to serve dared leave the police station before 3 in the morning.

Strange to say, her severest critics — if not her best friends — were some of the women of the community, for she did not hesitate to characterize a certain section in most caustic phrase.

She referred to this animosity in a paragraph in the story of her life. "Yet I love the old town," she declared, and she meant it. In the brief touch and go of newspapermen with her she left a very favorable impression. She was of that high type of pure-bred Yankee womanhood with the background of generations of culture and the courage of her convictions. Though reticent, she was courteous and helpful. Of the newspapermen assigned to report her

ADVERTISED CHARM OF CITY

Without question her works did more to advertise Gloucester as a summer home than any other medium in the past generation. They teem with vivid descriptions of the scenery, the beautiful harbor and the people, and were read by those with the means to come here and spy out the land for themselves. It is a coincidence that perhaps the two best advertisers of Gloucester have been literary people — Longfellow in his "Wreck of the Hesperus" and Miss Ward. Probably no other poem in English has been written, save perhaps Robert Southey's Inchcape Rock, with which there is a certain parallel that depicts more graphically the tragedy and pathos of the sea than that of Longfellow.

Her last production relative to Gloucester was the noble poem, "Gloucester," written for and read by Mr. Ward at the dedication of the big tablet at Stage Fort Rock in 1907. Its theme is the woman of the town anguished for the man who hauls the trawl, and is a masterpiece in its way. Louise Imogene Guiney, daughter of General Patrick Guiney of Boston, has also written the inspiring "Gloucester Harbor," which ranks high with those of literary trend. It may be found in her "Songs at the Start." It may be that the women of the town may one day place a modest tablet on the site of that seashore "paradise" — as she put it — where Elizabeth Stuart Phelps loved and wrought. For popular opinion is often changeable.

INTEREST IN SIAM

Ambassadors and plenipotentiaries from nearby and far-flung places of the earth have made Gloucester their summer home and so, when news came that the proletariat had arisen and temporarily deposed the reigning dynasty of Siam, there was more than ordinary interest evinced here. For some of the principals were well known hereabouts, having spent their summers on the Cape for many years.

About 35 years ago the legation came on from Washington and made its summer home at East Gloucester. It was accompanied by Edward Loftus an Englishman whose official title was secretary to the legation. Mr. Loftus was the spokesman for and in every way the dominant factor in the affairs of the Embassy.

There was about a half dozen in the staff of native Siamese, mainly young men who had been educated at Oxford. They were skilled tennis players capable of holding their own with the best in the tournaments held at the Hawthorne courts.

One group was especially intrigued with yachting and bought a boat — the Toulong, Siamese for something sentimental, joined the East Gloucester Club and participated in the races. They were apt pupils at the nautical game and soon had its fine points down to a system. One of the principals was Nai Choate whose name is remembered as the only one in which consonants did not predominate and also because of its sameness to the great barrister of the neighboring town of Essex.

Shortly after the World War Siam was granted a more independent status according to the formula of President Wilson and the title of secretary to the legation was changed to counsellor and the embassy while continuing to make headquarters here appeared to rely more on its own initiative than had been the case. Then about three years ago after a continuous residence of 35 years here the embassy transferred its summer headquarters to the Adirondacks.

GLOUCESTER, July 20 — A mid-week race for Sonders and Triangles of the Eastern Point Yacht Club fleet was sailed this afternoon in a fluky and variable wind from the north, northwest.

Tern trailed to Mrs. Groverman Ellis' Tid IV on two legs, both off the wind. Beating back to the finish from the southern mark off Eastern Point, Tern worked to weather to lead at the finish by two minutes.

In the Triangle class, young Brown handled his boat in expert fashion and worked into the lead on the windward leg after trailing until the yachts turned into the home stretch. The summary:

A RELIC OF OLD WEST PARISH PARSONAGE

Among many things of historical interest recently acquired by the Cape Ann Scientific Literary and Historical Association is a very old Bible or rather the second volume of a two volume edition used by Parson Jacques, pastor of the 2nd Parish church. This much prized addition to their library is a gift from Miss Harriet Trask, a descendant of Parson Jacques and is valuable not only as a relic but the circumstances under which this edition was printed give it a peculiar interest.

One reads on the fly-leaf that it was "ordered and appointed by the synod of Dort in 1618 and published in 1637 and it was undoubtedly the outcome of that great conclave of Protestant Ministers who met in 1618 at Dost to stamp as orthodox or heterodox the peculiar doctrines of Arminius and Calvin. The doctrine of Calvin was affirmed, so as this is what is called a study Bible the annotations (of which there is one under each verse) were probably framed so as to support his theology.

It was without doubt a very costly Bible, for King Jame's version was not printed until 1611 and the pronouncements of this assembly which were claimed to have "made Hell tremble" must have made it authoritative in the extreme.

These old worthies thought they had settled the question for all time, but while for a couple of centuries the doctrines of predestination and free grace persisted in different religious bodies and were painfully and prayerfully discussed they have practically disappeared from debate today and the room in which their labors — then considered miraculous — were performed is not now a place for pilgrimage but a dance hall.

However, the old Bible with its home-mended leather covers and worn yellow leaves still remains, a witness to the conscientious study of tormented souls, and as we look at it we follow them in imagination as they feverishly turn the pages trying to reconcile their unforgiving and sovereign God to their own lenient and compassionate hearts.

Hist. Sec. C. A. L. L. and Hist. Ass.

Note—This Bible with other small books of devotion, one entitled "Meat out of the eater or meditations concerning the necessity and usefulness of affliction unto God's children, 1703" can be seen at the Historical House, 25 Pleasant street.

Morgan Wallace, James Crane, William Halligan, Billy Butts, Frank McGlynn Sr., Charles Grapewin and Frederick Wallace appear in minor roles.

"Million Dollar Legs," Paramount's Olympic Games comedy, which comes to the North Shore Theatre on Thursday, with an all-star comedy cast headed by Jack Oakie, W. C. Fields, Lyda Roberti, Ben Turpin, Hank Mann, Andy Clyde, Susan Fleming and Dickie Moore, is said to be a completely dizzy burlesque which out-slapsticks slapstick.

The story begins in the Republic of Klopstokia, where all the men are named George and all the women, Angela, and the President, W. C. Fields, holds his job because he is the best weight lifter in the country. Jack Oakie plays the role of a red-hot American brush salesman who falls in love with one of Klopstokia's Angelas, and in order to save the defunct treasury of the country, organizes an Olympic Team which can carry off all the international honors and win an endowment offered by Jack's boss, the brush king. So all of Klopstokia, including the famous spy, Mata Machree, "the woman no man can resist," journeys to Los Angeles for the Olympic Games, and there, in spite of Mata's dirty work, good old Klopstokia comes through.

Lyda Roberti, noted comedienne of Broadway musical comedy, has the role of the seductive Mata. Susan Fleming, another former Broadway showgirl, is the romantic lead, and Dickie Moore turns comedian as the heroine's young brother, who has a bow and arrow and a penchant for shooting arrows at inopportune moments. Ben Turpin plays a new kind of spy: He watches both sides.

The film is based on an original script written by Joseph L. Mankiewicz and Henry Myers, and has been directed by Edward Cline, who was once one of the famous Keystone Kops.

lently done by Harmon MacGregor, and his brother, Claude (William Williams, who is superb) try to persuade him to go far away, mainly because of Claude's engagement to a ravishing, cultured and supposedly very wealthy young widow, Crystal Wetherby, who as yet does not know of Raymond's scandal. Raymond refuses and gets a job as a bailiff. One of his first duties make him man in possession of the home of the young widow. Neither knows the identity of the other. When the Dabney family come for dinner, Mrs. Wetherby persuades Raymond to be her butler for the looks of things. Neither the family nor he acknowledge the other's identity, but the situation provides an opportunity for great comedy. The party is finally broken up by the illness of Mrs. Dabney, who is finally unable to contain herself and bursts into tears at a casual lecture on prison that comes over the radio. The rest of the play is one laugh after another. Quick moving, clever, and subtle, the action is carried out perfectly by this exceptional group of players. Mrs. Dabney is played with great talent by Mata Roudin who will be remembered for her excellent work last season. Each player reflects, as is only natural, the experience he or she has had and the result is a company of players such as no winter stage could boast.

Next week's production will be "Our Wife," a romantic comedy by Lillian Day and Lyon Mearson, and judging from the audience of this week, should be well attended. A theatre of this nature is a credit to Cape Ann, and great interest should be taken by residents here.

The ushers included: Miss Rachael Warner, chairman, assisted by the Misses Florence Crane, Angelica Welldon, Sally White, Deborah Brown, Sarah Fraser, Joan Hopkinson and Mary Potter.

The Oceanside Committee includes: Mrs. Evans Dick Jr., chairman, Miss Mildred Anderson, Mrs. George Brewer Jr., Miss Louise Condit, Miss Florence Crane, Mrs. Alice Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. Everett A. Flye, Miss Louise Fessenden, Miss Frances Goodwin, Mr. Frederick Griffith, Mrs. James Halsted, Mr. Lawrence J. Hart, Miss Katherine Heckman, Mrs. John Howe, Mr. and Mrs. William J. MacInnis, Miss Elizabeth Mason, Mrs. Joseph T. Moulton, Mrs. Edward O'Keefe, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Otis, Mayor John E. Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Patch, Miss Madelyn Phillips, Mrs. Henry Powning, Mrs. William H. Robinson Jr., Mrs. John Saltonstall, Mrs. George Schanck, Miss Katherine Talbot, Mrs. Samuel Tucker, Miss Rachael Warner, Miss Ann Warren, Miss Barbara Wendell, Miss Sally White, Mrs. Hendricks Whitman.

MARIONETTES

The famous Tatterman Marionettes will appear at the Oceanside Theatre on Tuesday, July 26th at three o'clock in their new play, "The Legend of the Lightning."

Three years in preparation, this is by far the most ambitious production the famous puppets have ever attempted. The scenic requirements have necessitated the building of a huge sky dome, the first ever devised for a touring marionette company.

The story is the quaint old Pueblo Indian legend of why the thunderclap always follows the flash of lightning.

The folk lore of the Indians is sympathetically interpreted, and the play presents an accurate picture of their customs, ceremonies and manner of living that is educational and intensely interesting. The music and songs are authentic, many of them having been transcribed for the first time for this production.

The Tatterman Marionettes have made a tremendous countrywide success for the past several years for their intensely interesting productions and this special matinee performance will be a great attraction, especially for children — children of all ages to whom the novelty and charm of well-produced puppet plays is always new.

AFTER-THEATRE DANCE

The after-theatre dance at the Oceanside Theatre which was postponed this week will be held on next Tuesday, July 26th. The music will be by Ruby Newman and His Orchestra, and dancing will start immediately following the performance of "Our Wife," the romantic comedy featuring Natalie Hall, Erin O'Brien-Moore, and William Williams.

Reservations for tables may be had from Miss Atwater at the Oceanside. It is announced that there will be no cover charge to ticket holders of that evening.

THE LITTLE THEATRE

It is a far cry from the subtleties of George Bernard Shaw to the lighter entertainment given during the last week by the Gloucester School of the Little Theatre. In proof of their versatility and ability, the competent players presented to a delighted audience three one-act plays, varying in mood from the most medieval to the most modern.

The first production was "The Virgin of Chartreuse," a play that was doubly interesting because of its author, Donald Graf, who is a student at the school. Mr. Graf modeled his play somewhat after "The Miracle," the dramatic sensation of a few years ago, and achieved a splendid effect. Besides writing the play, Graf was cast in the important part of Perron which part he played with a sympathy of which only a creator could be capable. He was supported by the excellent acting of Harriet Smith, Marion Sawyer, and Elizabeth Rice. The scenery for the play was excellent, representing a Chateau in Chartres in the spring of 1224; and another interesting fact was the continuity with the stated period in lines, mood, and attitude throughout the play. A touch of the troubadour's influence from the world outside was effectually and subtly drawn in, adding a decided poetic and charming effect.

The second play was a delightful comedy, "Bargains in Cathay," by Rachel Field. In this the very opposite mood was reached, with romance, youth, and modernity predominating. Dorothy Church, as Emily, clerk in the book department of a large department store gave a winning and clever performance as she sold the last of three copies of her fiancé's poetry to his own father, the owner of the store. Miss Doty, the head of the department, a fussy, prim, and stern old maid was excellently done by Miss Elinor Creary, a newcomer to the school, who is incidentally, giving courses in diction, herself, while studying in other departments. Elizabeth Prime, as Miss Bliss, a spinster customer, and the first to succumb to the salesmanship of "Emily" was a great "hit" in this character. Charles Frost as Royce, the "lady-killer" of the second floor, was very clever and received much applause from the audience; while Scott Wilson and Malcom Watkins as Williams Jr. and Sr. were exceedingly good.

The third play was a short expose of the fragile quality of friendship when it is most needed, and was called "The Host," by Ferene Molnar. The scene was unusual, a dinner table, with many speeches and toasts all to the Host (splendidly played by Carl Johnson). The appearance of detectives breaks up the party, and talk of an arrest of the host prompts erst-while friends to leave, remembering children left at home, and duties on the morrow. Avowed loyalty is forgotten. The detectives turn out, however, to be practical jokers and not really detectives at all, and as Mr. Angell, the host, announces that the incident was after all "educational," the curtain is lowered on the disconcerted faces of the guests. The guests did very well, particularly as there was not much action in the play, and an atmosphere of general good will and hilarity had to be preserved.

A new feature this year at the Little Theatre is the production of a one-act play every Friday morning at 11.30.

This week's bill on Friday and Saturday evenings, July 22 and 23, will be "The Rise of Silas Lapham." This play will be particularly interesting since it is to be given in the costumes of 1896. The play, moreover is taken from the novel of the same name by William Dean Howells that was so popular at the time of its publication.

THE MOORLAND PLAYHOUSE

For their second offering The Moorland Players presented Behrman's smart and sophisticated comedy, "The Second Man." This was as excellently done as "Tons of Money" and proves undoubtedly the versatility of these players under the intelligent direction of Mr. Warren D. Goddard.

Mr. Moran was Storey, charming English writer and dilettante. Peggy Cox was the lovely Kendall Frayne around whom the other three characters revolve. Sarah Ellen Glass was irresistible as Monica Grey attracted to Storey and persistently followed by young Austin played by Mr. Tristram Coffin, a newcomer to the company. The co-operative playing of this cast of four was exceptional.

"On the Sands," the Theatre Arts prize play by Helen Pitts Parker will be offered next Thursday and Friday night on a bill of three one-act plays. Mrs. Parker is president of the Theatre Arts in Detroit and has written many of their best plays. Maud Moreing who was with the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York and who appeared in the first production of the play in Detroit will appear with Margaret Parsons in the play at The Moorland. Other plays appearing on the bill are "Another Way Out" by Laurence Langor and "The Marriage of Little Eva" by Kenyon Nicholson. In the last play will be seen little Minsey Hoggson, eight years old, who has appeared in "The Drunkard" given in Albany.

MISS PEARSON'S EXHIBIT

Miss Marguerite S. Pearson of Somerville and the Fenway Studio, Boston, is at 7 Atlantic avenue, Rockport for the season. Mrs. Slattery for exhibition this summer.
